

Julia Rhodes

From IMDB:

Julia is a film and TV actress as well as a busy show host.

She started working professionally in the entertainment industry at the age of 15. Julia's first audition was for the lead role of the 'Love Interest' for a Country Music Television music video titled "Whoever Made Those Rules".

For this role the producers of the video were looking to find a girl who had similar quirky likableness to that of the character Amelie from the feature film "Amelie". They felt Julia's natural energy and fun 'sense of play' fit the bill perfectly and cast her in the role.

"Whoever Made Those Rules" went on to earn the award 'Most Watched Video of the Year' and the band, that goes by the title "Doc Walker", have gone on to become one of North America's leading country music groups.

Sparked by a passion to learn more about the craft of performing, Julia began training in classical acting in Toronto. At the age of 18 Julia ventured overseas to further her training at leading drama schools in both Italy and London.

Since the completion of her European training, Julia has worked extensively doing touring theatre shows, musicals, television & film in North America, Europe and Africa.

In addition to acting, Julia has a passion for meeting and interviewing people from all walks of life. Julia spends a large part of her energy producing entertaining and uplifting web video content. Julia truly loves this work and it has taken her across the globe. In 2011 Julia traveled to Africa to meet and spend time with the children who live in the slums. She shot and released a video on the life saving effects of a new sustainable clean water strategy.
